

National Diabetes Day! :)

Today is national diabetes day. We should be thankful for the inventors of insulin, and for all those doctors and researchers who helped improve medicine throughout the years. Thank you for having these doctors and researchers today that are getting one step closer to finding this cure. Without their help, there would probably be no good medicine, and no cure. There's still no cure, but we did get proper medicine that saved a type 1 diabetic's life. Also, I am positive the cure is so close! Thank you for everyone who contributes in diabetes research, in raising money with me and my family. We are positive and confident a cure will come very soon! I will always keep my head high up and with my family, we hope, we dream, we believe and we pray every day for this cure, this life changing miracle!
